

I am adamantly against any changes in present broadcast ownership restrictions. These are public airwaves we're talking about, and should be as widely-held as possible, to ensure a diversity of voices.

Using the excuse of "all the new modes of communications" doesn't hold water, when you consider that the vast majority of Americas get the news from broadcast media. I don't want it further strained through some v-p's inside vest pocket. Deregulation--as in Enron and WorldCom--doesn't work.

Thank you.
